

KS3 Curriculum INTENT

Studying English at Caldey allows learners to experience a range of texts that will challenge and inspire them. We aim to develop our students' understanding of the rich world around them by discovering the links that Cumbria has to classic genres and great works of literature, alongside works of wider global and cultural significance. Students explore fiction, non-fiction, prose, drama and poetry through thematic units centred on significant texts, in which they are supported to develop their ideas through speaking as well as writing. We aim to build students' confidence via spoken language in the classroom: discussion, presentation, exploring texts through drama, and a range of formal and informal contexts allow students to explore their knowledge and challenge themselves in a supportive environment. Students are offered a structured approach to exploration of texts, extracts and individual words, building on their skills over each year and key stage. We give opportunities to produce to creative writing, exploring themes and ideas through students' own creativity and building their confidence when using ambitious vocabulary through specific work aimed at reducing the 'vocabulary gap'.

We aim to foster a love of reading, writing and all things English related through our enthusiasm for our subject and our well-planned curriculum. We have embedded strategies shown to be effective through recent pedagogical research: reciprocal reading and the writing revolution. Both of these strategies support students' reading, comprehension and analytical skills by making the key processes involved in reading and exploring texts explicit and therefore developing more effective reading habits. These habits provide a foundation which will help students to access the whole curriculum more effectively. We also focus on reading extracts and whole texts in lessons, asking students to read aloud as well as read along and to listen to others reading. We spend one hour a week specifically developing reading fluency. We want our students to be confident, assured learners with a depth of knowledge to support their understanding of the world around them. We have high expectations of all our students, challenging each individual to aim high and offering them the support and structure they need to do so.
